CRYPTO CURRENCY

A Crypto Currency or colloquially, Crypto is a digital currency designed to work through a computer network that is not reliant on any central authority, such as a government or bank, to uphold or maintain it.

Individual coin ownership records are stored in which is a digital ledger or blockchain, computerized database that uses a consensus mechanism to secure transaction records, control the creation of additional coins, and verify the transfer of coin ownership. The two most common consensus mechanisms are proof of work and proof of stake. Despite the name, which has come to describe many of the fungible blockchain tokens that have been created, cryptocurrencies are not considered to be currencies in the traditional sense and varying legal treatments have been applied to them in various jurisdictions, including classification as commodities, securities and currencies. Cryptocurrencies are generally viewed as a distinct asset class in practice.

The first cryptocurrency was Bitcoin, which was first released as open-source software in 2009. As of Jan 2025, there were more than 68,000 other cryptocurrencies in the marketplace, of which more than 68 had a market capitalization exceeding $1 billion.

CRYPTO TRADING

What's cryptocurrency trading?

Cryptocurrency trading is the buying and selling of cryptocurrencies on an exchange. We trade cryptos by speculating on their price movements via CFDs (contracts for difference). CFDs are leveraged derivatives – meaning that you can trade cryptocurrency price movements without taking ownership of any underlying coins. When trading derivatives, you can go long (buy) if you think a cryptocurrency will rise in value or go short (sell) if you think it will fall. By contrast, when you buy cryptocurrencies on an exchange, you buy the coins themselves. You'll need to create an exchange account, put up the full value of the asset to open a position, and store the cryptocurrency tokens in your own wallet until you're ready to sell.

How do cryptocurrency markets work?

The cryptocurrency market is a decentralized digital currency network, which means that it operates through a system of peer-to-peer transaction checks, rather than a central server. When cryptocurrencies are bought and sold, the transactions are added to the blockchain – a shared digital ledger that records data – through a process called 'mining'.
